LONGWORTH'S BODY REACHES SPEAKER'S NATIVE OHIO CITY

Statesman Returned to Receive Last Tribute of Cincinnatians

SCORES WEND WAY

Dignitaries Will Pay Last Adieu to Prominent
One Today

By H. Earl Wilson
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent CINCINNATI, O., Apr. 11.—Just as the first rays of the sun began sifting through the early morning mist of this Ohio Valley city today, a train puffed laboriously into Union Station here, bearing the body of Nicholas Longworth, late speaker of the United States House of Representatives.

Deaf to the hubbub of his native metropolis and blind to the saddened gaze of downcast neighbors, the state-man was being returned to receive a last tribute and to be buried in the city where his fathers came 127 years ago to build a family fortune.

This afternoon, the entire nation will bow its head in grief as the President of the United States, the Vice President, scores of dignitaries and persons from the humble walks of life pay their last adieu to Mr. Longworth.

While members of the family and a few close friends hid themselves within the bounds of "Rockwood" for a last brief mournful solitude, delegations from all over the nation began arriving to pay homage to the leader who is gone.

There are only 750 seats in Christ Church where the services will be held. Those in charge were forced to arrange for admission by card only.
Hundreds of organizations made application for the admission cards.

Among those arranging to attend the services were Governor George White and his official staff. A delegation from the State Legislature will also be present. The services will be brief, simple and impressive. They will consume but twenty minutes and in compliance with the widow's wishes, will consist solely of musical numbers by a string quartette and the reading of the Episcopal service.

Right Reverend H. Wise Hobson of the Episcopal Diocese will conduct the services and will be assisted by Rev.
Bernard Hummel, rector of Christ Church.

At two o'clock, the family and intimate friends of the speaker will enter the church and after that the doors will be opened to accommodate as many others as the capacity of the church will permit.

STATE NEWS

UNIONTOWN, Apr. 11.—Examinations for mine foreman, assistant mine foreman and fire bosses will be given

Co-operative Egg Auction To Be Held at Doylestown

DOYLESTOWN, April 11.—The first co-operative egg auction in Pennsylvania will be held in July or August in this borough. County Farm Agent William F. Greenawalt announced yesterday.

Thirty progressive poultrymen from various sections of Bucks county have arranged for the auction. The purpose of the auction is to attract large buyers from Philadelphia and other nearby cities.

The eggs will be rated according to the Pennsylvania standards created by the Bureau of Markets, Harrisburg.

"CITY OF KINGS" FORMS BASIS FOR A LECTURE

Dr. Horace G. Wright, Former Resident of Bristol, Shows Illustrations

MUSICAL NUMBERS

"The City of the Kings," an illustrated lecture depicting the early days of Rome, was presented by Dr. Horace G. Wright before members of the Travel Club and their guests in the Travel Club home, last evening.

Dr. Wright, who occupies the classical chair at Lehigh University, spent his youth in Bristol, and this fact, coupled with his thorough knowledge and study of the habits, customs, arts, etc., of the early Romans, made the address most interesting to the Bristol folks. The speaker of the evening was introduced by Mrs. Russell Burton, who was in charge of the program of the evening.

The pictures, some in colors, showed the early plan of the great "City of the Kings"; method of burial, and preservation of ashes after cremation; early jewelry, architecture, dwelt slightly on the drainage system of centuries ago, and depicted ancient and modern art of the Roman citizens.
The pictures included some of more recent times taken by Dr. Wright during his visits to Rome; as well as sketches of portions of the city as it is supposed to have appeared several centuries before Christ.

Dr. Wright is vice-president of the Classical Association of Atlantic States.

The group was welcomed by the president, Mrs. Horace Burton. Hostesses assigned for the evening were:
Mrs. Caroline T. Smith and Mrs. Horace Davis.

Musical numbers included: "Love Leads the Way," vocal selection by quartet composed of Mrs. John Meyer, Mrs. Charles I. Bowen, Mrs. Linton Martin, and Miss Grace Shaver; piano solo, "The Awakening of Spring" (Spilner); Mrs. Marburg D. Weagley; vocal selection, "Dreams of Long Ago" (Caruso); Miss Shaver.

Announcement was made by Mrs.
Bradley Ardrey of the spring social meeting of the club to be held on the evening of Thursday, April 23rd, when a play will be presented by members of the club, assisted by some of the young women of the junior organization. The dramatic, music and social committees will be in charge.

Representatives of the Bell Telephone Company explained operation of the dial system which will soon be in operation here.

STORE TO CLOSE

The grocery store of John Morici, Franklin and Wood street, will be closed all day tomorrow.—(Adv.)

RECUPERATING

and Mrs. Daniel Bonner, of 433 Jefferson avenue, is now doing nicely after an appendicitis operation at the Harriman Hospital.

SPEECH OF MAJOR GENERAL SMEDLEY D. BUTLER

Herewith is given the third and final installment of a stenotype report of the address of Major General Smedley D. Butler, at the meeting of the Fathers' Association of the Bristol public schools, here, Wednesday night:

Over in Philadelphia, now, they've got a bully, courageous youngster, (I call him a youngster because he's five years younger than I am) running that police force, and nobody's bluffing him for a second; and I imagine that he is fortunate enough to have a certain portion of the political machine behind him, also the Mayor; anyhow, they are not firing him. I had people with me, too, but they were way off in the rear. They didn't catch up till I'd been gone five years. Now they have caught up, and they are leading the procession, and glad to see me home.
They wouldn't want me to come back as a policeman, but they're glad to see me come back as a neutral,—a sort of umpire,—to talk for them.

However, Philadelphia is the best town in the world. They tear the streets up every other day to put the pipes down, and build subways, and break the springs of your automobiles; the cops sometimes bawl you out when you turn the other way; and the people do lots of things that are supposed to be rotten and crooked.
But it's a great city! And it's home!
And what's more, it's very much better to be clubbed in your own town than to be worshipped anywhere else, because nobody else knows you.

I must tell you a very ridiculous story, that "Jim" McGovern, this newspaper reporter sitting down here in front reminds me of. You see, I know all of these newspaper men, because they go around with me sometimes.

In an effort to make the Philadelphia police stay on their beats, I conceived the idea of inspecting them.
I would go round and see if they were there, and if I couldn't find them, I would go into the police station, and say to the captain, "Are your men all on the beat?" "Yes, sir, yes, Mr. General, they're all on their beat. Sergeant so and so was just in."

I knew d— well some of them were not on the street; so I simply conceived the idea of kidnapping them.
So one day I went down into one of the districts, found a patrolman on the street, had him get into the car with me, and drove out to Germantown, and about an hour later called up his station house.

"Captain, are all your men on the street?"

"Yes, sir, sir, sir, sir!"

"How do you know?"

"Because Sergeant so and so came in to report, and I saw him fifteen minutes ago. Yes, sir, sir, sir, they're all on their beats!"

"Oh! They're the greatest fellows for
"sir."

SCHOOL PATROLS MAY BE LEGALIZED BY BILL

Introduced Into Legislature By Senator Clarence J.
Buckman

AUTO CLUB ENDORSES

HARRISBURG, Apr. 11.—A bill to legalize the organization of school boy patrols for the guidance of children crossing intersections near schools and for teaching safety instruction in the schools, has been introduced in the Legislature by Senator Buckman, of Langhorne.

The Automobile Club of Philadelphia has endorsed it with this statement:

"School boy patrols are in operation under the A. A. A. plan, sponsored by A. A. A. motor clubs, in over 400 cities in the United States at the present time, with more than 5000 units, involving 500,000 boys. It is estimated that these youngsters afford protection to more than 5,000,000 school children.

"Accident figures in Pennsylvania for 1930 show that 416 children under 14 years of age were killed by motor cars, and 7661 children were injured as the result of being struck by automobiles. This appalling total of deaths and accidents must be reduced, and the only effective way to do it is to start safety education early, and impress the children with the necessity for carefulness in using public highways and streets. It has been proved also that the safety example of members of school boy patrols greatly assists in reducing the accident toll.
Philadelphia's child accident figures also are appalling, there being 73 children killed and 4584 injured last year, with the number of accidents growing yearly.

"There has been some question of the legality of the patrols due to a decision several years ago by the Pennsylvania Attorney General. Senator Buckman's bill provides specifically to take care of this question, that the members of the patrols shall not direct vehicular traffic or stand on the highways or streets, but shall be for the purpose of influencing other pupils to refrain from crossing highways at other than regular crossings, and to direct them not to cross highways at times when the presence of traffic would render such crossing unsafe."

Well, as I was saying, the Captain replied with absolute confidence and promptness: "He's just come in and reported, they're all on their beats, and they're doing fine."

"Have you seen patrolman Monahan?"

"And he particularly mentioned him as doing fine."

"Well," I said, "That's funny—because I've had him out in Germantown with me for an hour."

Well, there is a story that "Jim" McGovern always tells, and I'm going to tell it to you tonight.

There was a comical old sergeant on the police force; his name was Sergeant Rourke. One night he was inspecting his section of the police, and as he was going along Walnut street, and he got to the corner of Thirteenth and Walnut, he saw a cop coming along, swinging his club on his way home at 10 o'clock at night. He had been detailed to watch a rummage sale, and since the rummage place closed up at 10 o'clock, he was going home. Sergeant Rourke called: "Here you, come here, and what is your name?"

TO ARRAIGN WOMAN IN MRS. DILLEY'S DEATH

First Degree Murder Charge To Be Lodged Against
Mrs. Thomsen

AFFAIR IS RECOUNTED

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Apr. 11.— (INS)—Arraignment on charges of first degree murder and a possible immediate sanity test today were slated for Mrs. Frances Thomsen, of Pittsburgh, former school teacher, Wellesley College graduate, and mother of three children, who yesterday confessed to police the brutal slaying of Minnie E. Dilley, wealthy aged Forty Fort spinster.

Carl Thomsen, Pittsburgh lumber salesman and husband of the admitted slayer, was expected to arrive here today to be with his wife when she is brought into court.

It was because Mrs. Thomsen feared the aged spinster had "cast an influence" over her husband, police indicated, that she hitch-hiked from Pittsburgh to Forty Fort, near here, entered the Dilley home, and after argument with the aged woman beat her down with a ginger ale bottle, slashed her throat with a bread knife and left her dead in the living room of her home.

Whether relatives of the admitted slayer will move for a sanity test before the formal murder charge is lodged against her was uncertain early today.

Lazerte County officials, however, indicated they would do so themselves if relatives did not. There was a general belief among authorities here that Mrs. Thomsen suffered from hallucinations which unbalanced her mentality and drove her to the slaying.

GIRL RESERVES ACTIVITIES

A bake sale has been arranged by the Girl Reserves of the Bristol High School, to take place on Tuesday, April 21st, on Mill street.

This group will have as its guest on that date also Miss M. MacDonald, of Philadelphia, who will address the girls on "Standards and Symbols." At the conclusion of the regular program a supper will be served.

Patrolmen Leave Town With Keys to His Cell

TARENTUM, Apr. 11.—An "in again, out again, gone again" drama, reminiscent of the old doggerel, was enacted at the local jail recently, but with the added attraction of a legal "jail break."

Claude Painter was locked up in the calaboose on a charge of intoxication, then posted forfeit for his release.
And it was discovered the only two police officials with keys to the jail were not in town. A patrolman finally released Painter by sawing through the clasp of the cell lock.

Next day, infuriated and, police said, re-indebted, Painter appeared in town hall, shouting he was going to sue the town for $100,000. He was locked up again—in another cell.

Bristol Presbyterian Church

The subject of the sermon to be preached at the 11 o'clock service of worship at the Bristol Presbyterian Church this Sunday morning will be "The Emaus Road," continuing the theme of the Easter tide. The text is found in Luke 24:21: "We hoped that it was he who should redeem Israel." At the evening worship service, held at 7:45, the minister, Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, will preach on the subject,
"An Enemy's Gift," from II Samuel, 16:11, "Let him alone, and let him curse, for Jehovah hath bidden him."
The evening service will be supplemented with a moving picture, showing some of the work of the Board of Christian Education.

BRIDGE OFFICIALS MEET THURSDAY TO PLAN OPENING

Details for Putting Span Into Use Will Be Arranged

INTERVIEW APPLICANTS

Those Seeking Positions Were Examined This Morning

Officials and directors of the Burlington-Bristol Bridge Company will meet at the Burlington City Loan and Trust Company, Burlington, N. J., Thursday to solve problems incident to the opening of the new span.

All who have applied for jobs on the bridge were requested to appear at the bridge office at 9 o'clock this morning to have their applications heard.

The directors and officials will meet at 9:30 a. m., Thursday. The officials have been sent notice of the meeting, which will be one of the most important held since formation of the company.

Those who will be present are:
George deB. Keim, president; Jonathan Jones, Clifford L. Anderson, Joseph R. Cheesman, vice-presidents; E.
J. Patterson, secretary and treasurer;
Lloyd Cross, assistant secretary; W.
Emory Cheesman, assistant treasurer, and Walter Robb, F. U. Kennedy and C. H. Oskin, the other three members of the board of directors.

Tolls and other immediate problems concerning the bridge will be discussed at the meeting. One problem which will occupy the attention of the officials for a considerable length of time is selection of men for various positions. These men will be recommended as the outcome of the hearings on their applications today.

Selection of a bridge manager will also be made at the session, it is believed. Other intimate details will be disposed of in preparation for the opening.

The bridge will be opened May 2, with appropriate ceremonies. Service clubs of Burlington and Bristol, as well as official bodies of both communities, will arrange for the parades and other parts of the ceremonies.

POWER OF ADVERTISING

Beyond all question the most potent creator of business in America is the newspaper advertisement. Millions upon millions of dollars are expended every day in the stores of the country because well written advertisements have directed public attention to convenient, becoming, attractive, useful, ornamental and suitable merchandise. The sale of all necessities, all luxuries, all indulgences, is more powerfully stimulated by the newspaper advertisement than by any other agency. Only hunger, cold and nakedness are comparable to the advertisement as a promoter of sales—and even purchases of food, fuel and clothing are influenced more largely by the business columns of the press than by any other influence except immediate necessity.

The largest stores in the great cities have been built up by advertising, their persistent and clever invitation to the public to share in their bargains. Imagine, if you can, what would happen to daily sales of merchandise, real estate, theater tickets, insurance, books and other things of large distribution if newspaper advertisements were prohibited by law for six months.

It is not the current news of events alone that makes the press of such incalculable value to the nation, nor the free editorial expression of opinion. The business news of the day, as told by business concerns in their announcements to the public, decisively influences both the volume and the direction of trade which flows to this or that store, office or bank. This is a fundamental fact, and one that the small business house particularly cannot afford to ignore.

THE BALANCE OF TRADE

The eternal struggle of nations is for economic independence. Every civilized country is striving to be self-supporting, so that in time of war it may not lack resources, and in time of peace it may enjoy the prosperity and economic well-being which are given to those with a favorable trade balance.

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER XLV.

"THAT'S out," Walter repeated. "The Baroness got hers because of jealousy, nothing else . . . What did he do say about this maid taking a shot at herself?"

"The bullet hit from behind. What'd she want to bump herself off about anyway?"

"What's anything about? Who hid Frost's lighter in the garden where Terry O'Toole would be sure to find it? Who left the key in the bedroom upstairs and got out through the keyhole? Who goes walking up and down the side of the house like a fly on a window-pane? You tell 'em, Sheriff. I dunno."

"The lighter—about that," Bim ventured. "And what happened to Jane tonight. It's all so illogical. I was wondering if maybe some illogical person might have done it. It's about the only way you can explain it, isn't it? Someone who isn't responsible, you know."

Walter gave her a long, harassed stare and Reynolds regarded her in a steady, intent way. They said nothing. She went on, embarrassed, "I just thought—well, I suppose it's silly—"

Time To Act

Reynolds accomplished one of his fat shrugs and turned to the other man. "Might as well face it, son. At that, if I'm thinking what you are, it wouldn't be so worse. Restrain before more damage is done. Fair enough."

Walter muttered, "Oh, shut up," and sat with his chin in his hands. After a time he asked Bim what she knew.

She was well aware what he meant and did not hesitate. She told about the tire tracks in the sand behind Eagle's Nest and about the washed car in the Trent garage with sand under the pad on the running board. And in the end she told about the laundry mark on the towel.

"It was the same as that on the sheet, Walter. Blurred and with a curved letter at the beginning—an R, I think. And Mary is sure about the lighter; it was on the table before Millicent came in. And—why, I remember now! We met her in the garden later on, Carl Carey and I, and she was excited. Said she was going to see Mary, only she was coming from the house instead of going toward it. She—oh, you know how she feels about Bob. Nothing she wouldn't do."

Walter stirred uneasily; he got up and moved off a few paces, finally came back, his face grim.

"I suppose," he said tonelessly, "you may as well hear the rest of it."

What Walter told had to do with the gardener, Terrance O'Toole.

"He's just another who held out on us. But he thought better of it and came around yesterday and confessed that there was a little more to his story of sitting up all night and finally going for a ramble up to Baird's bungalow."

"It seems that Millicent has been in the habit of getting him in nights when Bob has his spells. You know how it is with Bob; he had nervous attacks and then someone has to keep him in bed or he'll go out and drive around and break his neck or someone else's."

"Well, Millicent had Terry over last Monday night. She came running down to his cottage with a coat over her nightdress and bedroom slippers falling off her feet every step, crying and saying that Bob was in trouble and for Terry to come right away. He went back with her but didn't stay long, for Bob wasn't in bed shape—not like he'd been other times. From what Terry had to say I got the impression that Bob was having a chill; he laid and shivered and didn't say anything, though it seemed to scare Millicent half to death."

"But the point of it was that Bob had been out somewhere. Terry took off his shoes and they were muddied as if he'd walked in the mud and then in the wet grass. There were stains on them, too; they were white buckskin, you see, and the stains showed up. Millicent kept talking to him, Terry said; she was excited and she kept telling him that everything would be all right and he was to forget he'd been out of the house."

"Of course," he finished, "it's not conclusive. But putting everything together . . ."

"Bob had nothing to do with it!" Bim declared stoutly, sick with the sight of Walter's distress.

"He's irresponsible as a baby," Walter said.

"I suppose you know," Reynolds remarked. "That folks have been hanging on him from the start?"

"Oh, silly!" Bim choked on that. "Not altogether, child. The woman infuriated him when she snubbed his wife, and they say he nursed his grudge all

POWER OF ADVERTISING

Beyond all question the most potent creator of business in America is the newspaper advertisement. Millions upon millions of dollars are expended every day in the stores of the country because well written advertisements have directed public attention to convenient, becoming, attractive, useful, ornamental and suitable merchandise. The sale of all necessities, all luxuries, all indulgences, is more powerfully stimulated by the newspaper advertisement than by any other agency. Only hunger, cold and nakedness are comparable to the advertisement as a promoter of sales—and even purchases of food, fuel and clothing are influenced more largely by the business columns of the press than by any other influence except immediate necessity.

The largest stores in the great cities have been built up by advertising, their persistent and clever invitation to the public to share in their bargains. Imagine, if you can, what would happen to daily sales of merchandise, real estate, theater tickets, insurance, books and other things of large distribution if newspaper advertisements were prohibited by law for six months.

It is not the current news of events alone that makes the press of such incalculable value to the nation, nor the free editorial expression of opinion. The business news of the day, as told by business concerns in their announcements to the public, decisively influences both the volume and the direction of trade which flows to this or that store, office or bank. This is a fundamental fact, and one that the small business house particularly cannot afford to ignore.

The eternal struggle of nations is for economic independence. Every civilized country is striving to be self-supporting, so that in time of war it may not lack resources, and in time of peace it may enjoy the prosperity and economic well-being which are given to those with a favorable trade balance.

Communities are nations within a nation. Economic independence, while possible only within restricted limits for communities, is just as essential to the city or town as to the nation of which it is a part. Prosperity is impossible without a favorable balance of trade.

Communities which do their shopping in other communities are in the same position as the nation which goes abroad to buy its goods. America is prosperous because its exports exceed its imports, which means more money is coming into the country than is going out. Bankrupt nations of Europe are bankrupt because they are spending their money for the goods of other nations, instead of selling their goods for other nations' gold.

The great cities of the United States owe their wealth, size and prosperity to the dollars of small towns. The margin of trade with its profit is on the side of the city. The people of this community cannot import mail order house goods and still enjoy the benefits of a favorable balance of trade. To share in the nation's prosperity and growth the community must produce and sell more and buy more at home.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of grandfather Jacob H. Young, who departed this life suddenly, April 6, 1929. The pearly gates were opened. A gentle voice said "Come." And with farewells unspoken He gently entered home. Sadly missed and never forgotten by granddaughter.

RUTH E. SLACK.

4-11-1t

In loving memory of father and grandfather, Jacob H. Young, who departed this life suddenly, April 6, 1929. Remembrance is a golden chain Death tried to break, but all in vain.

To have, to love, and then to part

Is the greatest sorrow of one heart.

The years may wipe out many things,

But this wipe out never—

The memory of those happy days

When we were all together.

Sadly missed by son-in-law and daughter, and grandchildren.

Notice of Special Bill

NOTICE is hereby given that during the regular session of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to be held in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one, there will be introduced a bill entitled "An Act to repeal certain special acts pertaining to taxation in Bucks County," to wit:

1. An Act of Assembly approved March 29th, 1859, P. L. 294, entitled, "An Act Relating to the Collection of State and County Taxes in the County of Bucks."

2. An Act of Assembly approved March 31st, 1864, P. L. 177, entitled, "A Supplement to an Act Relating to the Collection of State and County Taxes in the County of Bucks."

3. An Act of Assembly approved February 14th, 1867, P. L. 201, entitled, "An Act Supplementary to a Supplement to an Act Relating to the Collection of State and County Taxes in the County of Bucks approved Thirty-first day of March, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-four."

4. An Act of Assembly approved April 1st, 1868, P. L. 588, entitled, "A Further Supplement to an Act Relating to the Collection of State and County Taxes in the County of Bucks."

5. An Act of Assembly approved April 10th, 1873, P. L. 604, entitled, "An Act in Relation to Fees of County Treasurer of Bucks County, Pennsylvania."

6. Section 52 of an Act of Assembly approved April 1st, 1836, P. L. 436, entitled, "An Act Regulating Election Districts and for Other Purposes."

7. Section 3 of an Act of Assembly approved March 14th, 1844, P. L. 110, entitled, "A Further Supplement to the Act Entitled, 'An Act Relating to County Rates and Levies,' and Township Rates and Levies." Passed the Fifteenth day of April, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Thirty-four."

The object of said bill is to repeal special laws pertaining to the collection of taxes in the County of Bucks, by the county treasurer and by such repeal to bring the County of Bucks under the general laws of taxation of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and such other matters as are referred to in said Acts or Sections of the same.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By NANCY LEE

DEAR NANCY LEE: This is a question which I often wonder about. Will you please help me?

When in church with a boyfriend should a girl make her own offering or accept his and then give it? Thanking you in advance, I am, WONDERING.

WONDERING: I feel sure that most of us would rather add our own mite to help swell the total of the collection. However, there is no set or rigid rule about this. If you hold your offering in evidence, the young man will understand.

DEAR NANCY LEE: We are two fellows of 18.

We never took a girl home nor did we ever have a date with a girl. One night two girls, whom we never saw before, asked us to take them home. They were good-looking. What should we do in a case like this? What should we talk about? After getting pretty well acquainted with the girls should we invite them to our homes? What kind of entertainment should we give? We thank you. JUST TWO PALES.

JUST TWO PALES: Is there any reason why either of you should not escort two girls home, even if you do not like them? There is no reason to continue the acquaintance beyond ordinary limits. But, if you do like them, then I am sure that you will find all kinds of mutual interests, hobbies and ideas about which to talk and establish a mutual friendship. Yes, why not invite the girls home? I am sure that your parents would not object if the girls are nice and well-bred. With a radio, a victrola and a piano, there should be no dearth of entertainment. If your people do not wish to bother about refreshments, why not take them for coffee and a light repast on the way home?

DOOMS BERLENBACHBy James L. Kilgallen
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, April 11.—Five years ago Paul Berlenbach, the "Astoria Assassin," was the light heavyweight champion of the world. He was riding the crest of fame, a "big shot" in his chosen profession. Everywhere he went friends slapped him on the back and told him he was a great man. Whenever he fought big crowds went to see him deal his famous knock-out left hook.

Today Berlenbach is a pathetic "has been"—trying to kid Father Time and stage a "come back" in the gruelling and heartless business of bunting beads. It isn't that Berlenbach is broke. He still has a substantial bank roll but he thinks he needs ready cash and, besides, the lure of the game is calling him.

Berlenbach was paid a paltry $40 in Brooklyn the other night for knocking out "Six Finger" Eddie Clark in the third round of a preliminary bout at the New Broadway Arena. This was quite a financial comedown for Berlenbach who, in his last appearance in Brooklyn, was guaranteed $125,000.

Only a small turnout of fans witnessed "Oom Paul's" achievement if, indeed, it could be called that. They scarcely could have paid more than $2,000. And yet less than five years ago, on July 26, 1926, a vast crowd paid $478,000 to see him drop his title on a close decision to Jack Delaney in Ebbets Field, not a great distance from where he fought the other night.

Berlenbach's "come back" showing was rather pathetic. Clark, a Negro veteran, had little to offer. The swarthy, black-haired Berlenbach crawled through the ropes and took the same corner that he occupied for his tenth professional fight with Jimmy Darcy. A touching gesture. And, by a strange coincidence, Eddie Forbes, who refereed his bout with Darcy, was again the third man in the ring. Berlenbach was seconded by Dan Hickey, the veteran trainer who made a champion of Paul. After Berlenbach had "k. o." Clark in the third, old timers recalled that he had "k. o." Darcy in the third, too. The Darcy bout was staged less than two weeks before "Berly's" sensational four-round defeat of Jack Delaney in the old Madison Square Garden.

But the Berlenbach that exchanged leather with Clark the other night was just a groping ghost of his old self. The old Berlenbach would have put Clark away in less than a round. Clark seemed ready to flop throughout the bout. He went down from a hard shove in the second round and was on the rosin when the bell rang. He came out for the third with an apprehensive look on his pan and while he was backing away "Berly" let go one of his old-time left hooks. The blow caught Clark on the button and it was "curtains."

Well, sir, old Berly appeared to be as happy in his dressing room after the fight as if he had knocked out Max Schmeling. Eagerly he inquired: "How did I look?" The hangers on in the liniment-smelling room didn't have the heart to tell him "terrible." And so, from time to time, you may read of Berlenbach going in against other "ham and egg" fighters. For, until someone knocks him out, he will be convinced that he still is a good fighter. His manager, Hickey, insists that Berly is well preserved, despite his three-year absence from the ring, and that he is anything but a punch-drunk specimen.

In twenty-one fights he never got hurt," Hickey insists. "It will be four-round fights for him for awhile. He can't start at the top. But he's got plenty of stuff left. Just wait and you will see."

Berlenbach hadn't fought before since May, 1928, when he retired. In his day he fought some mighty good fellows. He gave William Lawrence Stripling a terrific pasting in New York in 1925. He had Stripling hold on for dear life throughout fifteen rounds and, of course, Berlenbach's hand was raised at the finish. He could hurt with that terrific left hook to the body and Stripling found it out in the first round.

The irony of it is that while Berlenbach is today getting $40 for a fight Stripling will soon meet Schmeling for the heavyweight championship of the world, a bout that should net the Atlantan a small fortune.

Berlenbach is only 30 years old. He says he has about $125,000 to show for the half million he earned in the ring. But he needs ready cash. Most of his fortune is tied up in municipal bonds which have decreased in value. He is a clumsy, likeable chap, afflicted with a stolid determination that prevents him from realizing that the chances are 100 to 1 against that he will ever be more than a "has been."

SPEECH OF GEN'L BUTLER

He said: "My name is John Jones."

"Then what is your beat?"

He replied: "I have no beat. I'm on my way home; I've just been to a rummage sale."

"Then," said the sergeant, "No such thing! You'll stay right on this beat."

"Well, I'm out duty."

"No you're not, at least not now."

That fellow Butler is likely to be coming around here kidnapping somebody, and if we have one extra man, then there'd be nobody absent! You stay on the beat, there, till twelve o'clock."

However, no matter how unfortunate the experience was, or how disagreeable, (I lost all my teeth, and got my blood pressure down to eighty when I left, and nobody came to see me off except a lot of inebriate newspaper men, who are the best friends a fellow can have) those years on the force were well worth it, because I became part and parcel of that town; and although I wasn't born there, I was raised right outside of it; and wherever I go in the world, and I've been around a bit, I'm identified as a Philadelphia cop, and no matter how much suffering I may have had, that was worth it.

After eating Mrs. Runyon's dinner, I can see how you like Bristol, and no wonder. This river is a gorgeous sight; there isn't any place in the world like our State. The more I go around those bush States in the West, and the South, the more I like Pennsylvania. They make fun of us in those other States, and I scrap back. We've got to get over this habit of scrapping. It does nothing but get you into trouble. However, Mr. Runyon, I don't want to give these fathers any bad advice, because they have enough troubles of their own. Mrs. Butler and I agreed on a place to live (it's the first thing we have ever agreed on) and we agreed on that because she picked it out. Although she disliked this Philadelphia experience more than I did, because I saw the funny side of it, saw all the green whiskers and glasses the fellows were wearing, nevertheless I enjoyed it. She didn't. The tie is too strong; and after living somewhere else, when I left it up to her, she came back to Delaware County. You're just as near to Philadelphia as possible, and still not paying city taxes. Out along this river, it is everlastingly quiet and peaceful, and the people are so kindly,—and I bet the beds are fine, too. The fellow who sleeps in a sleeping car as a steady diet, looks with the greatest interest on beds that are stationary. This Pennsylvania Railroad is the greatest railroad in the world, but their engineers are the roughest fellows you ever saw. They are shifting cars every few minutes during the night. However, it's the greatest railroad in the world.

I'm very grateful to you. I haven't been able to say anything to you that's worth guiding you in life. I wouldn't advise any of you to follow in my footsteps, but you'd have a h— of a good time.

I'm trying to bring up two children. I'm really bringing up one; Mrs. Butler is bringing up the other. My boy, when his landlord hit him over the head with a club, knocked him out, and threw him out through the second story window. Mrs. Butler's boy hasn't gotten to that stage yet.

But try to bring these boys up, so at least when you go to bed at night, you can look at yourself in the looking glass, and not be ashamed of some backing of water; bring them up so they won't have to be afraid of having to apologize about something.

I'm very grateful to you boys, and to you, Comrades of the American Legion. There is nothing in the world like the association that you get from sleeping in mud with somebody else. There is something about mud that ties you together. It must be the common desire of everybody to go un-bathed and unwashed; and generally there is a blanket mixed up in it somewhere. If you have just slept in a blanket somewhere with somebody, that's better than just sleeping in the mud.

Now, out in China in 1900 during the Boxer Campaign, one night we made a forced march, and we had no blankets, and we went out in the moonlight to lie down to sleep. Three of us slept together for warmth; I, being the senior member, slept in the middle and had one of them on both sides. There was a Pennsylvanian, a corporal by the name of Abbott, who was a darned good soldier. He had been in the marine corps for some time, and had learned the trick of sleeping in the mud. He went off somewhere and got himself a blanket. I must have unconsciously or subconsciously seen him rolling up in that blanket, down the little company's street, because in the morning when we awakened at half past two to be sure to be on time to get off at five, two always got up at five! I was in his blanket. He was lying on the ground, but he was so sleepy, and so fat, that he just slept on and never knew it. Next time I saw him was 25 years later, at an Armistice Day meeting. He now is the manager of an oil company. He drove up in his fine automobile, got out and spoke to me, and I didn't recognize him, because he had falling of the chest very greatly, and a big bay window. He asked me if I would give him that blanket back. He remembered it all these years that I swiped his blanket in the middle of the night.

I'm very grateful to you for coming out, sitting still, and especially for asking me to come here; because sometimes people haven't even been willing to sit down in the same room with me. I'm very much obliged to you, and I do wish this Fathers' Association to get more than 350 members, and to have more fathers. Anything you do up here in Bristol is all right. Again, I'm much obliged to you. Good night!

Choose Chevrolet
six-cylinder trucks for low first-cost and unsurpassed economy

The economy of using Chevrolet six-cylinder trucks is an actual dollars-and-cents economy that shows up, month after month, on the balance sheet. It starts with a purchase price that is one of the lowest in the market for a complete unit. It continues throughout Chevrolet's long life with an operating cost that is unsurpassed!

Consider, for example, the cost-records of leading national organizations who use large fleets of Chevrolets. They prove

(1) That no other trucks of equal capacity give any better gasoline, oil or tire mileage than Chevrolet. (2) That the cost of keeping a Chevrolet in satisfactory running order is unusually low. (3) That Chevrolet trucks are exceptionally reliable and long-lived.

Today, Chevrolet's proved economy is available to buyers in every truck-using field. For Chevrolet offers a new line of quality bodies that includes a type for every hauling requirement.
